FAMOUS BY HIS INJUNCTIONS.

Judge John Jackson, Central Figure in the Great Miners' Strike in the United States.

The central figure in the great minera strike is United States Judge John Jay Jackson. He has gained a national reputation from his versatility of accommoda-tion in the matter of injunctions. The judge is the oldest of the district judges judge is the oldest of the district judges of the United States.

John Jay Jackson, eldest son of General John J. Jackson, was born at Parkersburg.
W. Va., August 4, 1824; was graduated from Princeton college in 1845; was a law student under his father and John J. Allen, president of the supreme court of Virginia; was admitted to the bar the following year and elected the first prosecuting attorney of Wirt county in 1848, and the same year was appointed to the same office in Ritchie county.

epiointed to the same once in county.

In 1852 and again in 1853 he was elected to the Virginia legislature from Wood county. During this time he acquired a reputation as a speaker and debater. In 1852, 56 and 60 he was an elector on the White ticket. In the political campaigns in which he took part he was sustly distinguished as a speaker, and by his efforts in the region of the state where he lived contributed largely to the success of the Bell and Everett ticket in carrying Virginia in 1860. In August, 1861, he was appointed United States district judge for the district of West Virginia, which office he now holds. Taking sides with the Union when the war broke out, he naturally drifted into the Republican party, and served it faithfully. When peace was declared, he co-operated with the Democratic party and has been in sympathy with that political organization since that time.

GAVE ATHENS, PA., A LIBRARY.

Generous Gift of a $20,000 Building Made by Jesse Spalding, the Lumberman.

Perhaps he to whom the most honor should be accorded is the man who gives of his substance while still in the flesh, and before his heirs have an opportunity ficence that he might to defeat any beneficence that he might favor in his last will and testament, says

the Lumberman.
Several instances of this kind, where lumbermen have given to charitable purposes, have lately been recorded. The latest and perhaps one of the most commendable of all, is that of Jesse Spalding, the well known lumberman of this city, who donated the sum of $20,000 to the Arhens Historical Society, of Athens. Pa, for the erection of a free library building. The town is the birthplace, and during his youth was the home, of Mr. Spalding, and, naturally, he felt like giving of his wealth to building for himself a monument at the old home.
The building, which is to be used as a home for the Historical Society, as well as for library purposes, will be two stories high and of a tendency toward the Colonia style of architecture. The day of the laying of the cornerstone was the 119th anniversary of the arrival in the town of Athens—then called Tloga Point—of Genversary of the arrival in the town of Athens—then called Tloga Point—of Gen-eral Sullivan's army, which was on its way to Western New York to fight the Sp

L. R. Radeliff, a Young St. Louisan Has Such a Scheme-Will Transport Miners' Supplies. L. R. Radeliff, a well known young St.

Louis business man, has gone to Alaska. His idea is that he can make more money by ministering to the wants of eager gold hunters than by searching for it himself, and he has fully outlined a plan by which he expects to transport freight across the range on an overhead cable tramway, which he is prepared to build. In addition to his preject in this direction, Mr. Raddiff has purchased two carloads of burros in New Mexico and Colorado, and has instructed his representative to ship them to him at Seattle, where he will reconsign them to Juneau, and thence to the scene of his projected enterprises.

The young St. Louis man bases his ideas on a profitable business on the probability by ministering to the wants of eager gold The young St. Louis man bases his ideas on a profitable business on the probability that the chief difficulty to be encountered by the rushing argonauts will be to get their kits and supplies over the pass during the closed sesson, which sets in early in September. He thinks that an overhead tramway which can be operated all during the winter season, in spite of the ice and snow, which will stop surface hauling, may praye an invaluable boon to the men isolated in the interior, and at the same time develop into a veritable mint for the projector. Mr. Radeliff is well equipped with money, and expects to interest capitalists at St. Paul in his business venture.

Kay.

The father of the scensed came to Colorado Springs and took the body home with him for burial.

The father of the murdered man said that at the time the young man was killed he did not have over $100 with him. All who knew young Kay say that he was an honest, steady-going young man, and for the last soven years had been working hard. He had come to Manitou for a rest from his labors and did not have an enemy in the world who would do him an injury. Young Kay had been a clerk in a dry goods store at Wisner, Neb.
